DAO

A DAO (Decentralized Autonomous Organization) is larger than a smart contract. DAOs operate without centralized control and are governed by smart contracts running on blockchain technology. Smart contracts are autonomous programmable codes that represent agreements between two or more parties. GROWFI is a DAO much larger than a smart contract.

Over the years, traditional banking has increasingly embraced technology in its approach to operations. However, it continues to rely on backward policies that do not foster growth or evolution as a financial system. Centralization and a persistent inflationary system threaten the economies of millions of users around the world.

Blockchain technology is merging with finance, giving rise to a financial ecosystem with unlimited options for investing capital in ways that promote growth and adaptability in a rapidly changing and evolving economy. Cryptoassets are now the most viable investment option, avoiding the financial stagnation that is always present in traditional systems.

The integration and implementation of AI (Artificial Intelligence) in new financial ecosystems increases efficiency and results, improving user expectations. From this, we conclude that technology is the best ally in the financial field.

STABLE CRYPTOASSETS

These are cryptocurrencies whose value is pegged to the US dollar, many of which are accepted as transactional currency around the world. USDC is the most widely used stablecoin after USDT and is the asset used in regulated applications that offer cryptocurrency trading services.

BLOCKCHAIN

Cryptocurrencies run on different blockchains, allowing for portability. Some blockchains are more widely used than others because they offer security, speed, and low transaction costs. One of the most notable is the BASE blockchain, a very low-cost, easy-to-use Ethereum layer-2 network.
